CMA Rehabilitating Cheeto, the Lucky Seahorse Seahorse Dropped from the Sky by a Seagull

PRESS RELEASE

Clearwater, FL (May 11, 2017) – Clearwater Marine Aquarium rescues and rehabilitates marine life of all sizes, from dolphins and sea turtles to other sea creatures in need. One little seahorse, named “Cheeto”, has captured hearts with its surprising story of survival, thanks to the quick actions of a little girl and her mother.

While enjoying a day at Indian Shores Beach, in Pinellas County, Florida, a seagull dropped what looked like a cheeto at a little girl’s feet. After realizing it was a seahorse, her mom called CMA for help. A CMA Rescue Team volunteer then brought the lucky seahorse, to the aquarium. After an intense week of care, Cheeto, a female orange lined seahorse, started eating grass shrimp. Cheeto now appears to be recovering nicely. When healthy, Cheeto will be released back home, into the wild.

“The level and amount of care we are providing Cheeto is indicative of the serious commitment and passion that CMA has for all marine life,” says David Yates, CEO, “Each creature is important to us, and we are fortunate to have the opportunity to rehabilitate Cheeto.”

Cheeto, the lucky seahorse, can be viewed at <https://seewinter.com> on the “Cheeto Cam” Or, Cheeto can be viewed by guests at CMA until its release back home.
